

About SC<sup>3</sup>

SC<sup>3</sup> - South Carolina Computing Consortium is a partnership among five major research institutions in South Carolina for the development of cyberinfrastructure throughout the state.

SC<sup>3</sup> was created in spring 2007 to:

- foster cyberinfrastructure-enabled research and education in South Carolina
- promote the key role cyberinfrastructure plays in growing South Carolina's knowledge-based economy
- showcase South Carolina cyberinfrastructure projects at SC07

SC<sup>3</sup>'s presence at SC07 is supported by:

- Clemson Computing and Information Technology (CCIT)
- The College of Engineering and Science at Clemson University
- Charter Business

SC<sup>3</sup> is an initiative spearheaded by Clemson University CIO Jim Bottum.

Partner institutions:

-  Clemson University
-  University of South Carolina
-  Medical University of South Carolina
-  Hollings Marine Laboratory
-  Savannah River National Laboratory

SC<sup>3</sup> @ SC07: The planning committee is an interdisciplinary group of faculty and IT personnel, including:

- Nathan Bohlmann, CCIT, Clemson University
- Jim Bottum, Vice Provost and CIO, Clemson University
- Duncan Buell, Professor and Chair, Computer Science and Engineering, University of South Carolina
- Sebastien Goasguen, Assistant Professor, School of Computing, Clemson University
- Mary Harris, Director, Computational and Statistical Sciences, Savannah River National Lab
- Eric Lacy, Director and Professor, Hollings Marine Lab
- Walt Ligon, Associate Professor, Electrical and Computer Engineering, Clemson University
- Krishna Madhavan, Assistant Professor, School of Computing, Clemson University
- John Minor, CCIT, Clemson University
- Jim Pepin, Chief Technology Officer, CCIT, Clemson University
- Roger Poston, Director, Academic and Research Computing, Medical University of South Carolina
- Matthew Saltzman, Associate Professor, Mathematical Sciences, Clemson University
- J. Barr von Oehsen, Research Assistant Professor/Senior Developer, CCIT, Clemson University
- Mihaela Vorvoreanu, Assistant Professor, Communication Studies, Clemson University