

Mary E. Kurz

Assistant Professor, Clemson University

Mary E. Kurz, PhD, is an assistant professor in Industrial Engineering at Clemson University. She is a member of INFORMS and a Senior member of the Institute of Industrial Engineers. Dr. Kurz received her doctoral degree from the University of Arizona in Systems and Industrial Engineering in 2001, focusing on scheduling flexible flowlines. Her current research is funded by NSF and industry grants.

Research interests: Developing heuristics and meta-heuristics to find solutions for scheduling and related optimization problems as well as investigating the impact of meta-heuristic design on performance.
